

Nystrom History Atlas Work:

Look up words I have underlined and write their definitions in your social studies journal.

Today you had a chance to peruse our new History Atlases. It turns out that for many of you they are not new because you used them last year. I was then hesitant to give them out because I didn't want to repeat something you had already learned, but as Destinee and Yali said, they're fun and interesting and you don't necessarily remember everything you learned last year.

So, today's lesson will be new for some of you and review for some of you, but for all of you, I hope it helps you learn more about the history of our country. There is a plethora of information in these atlases.

Complete the worksheet(s) connected to this atlas.

- In your social studies journal: write down at least 2 pieces of information you found interesting. Explain why you felt the information was interesting.
- Write at least 2 (more is better) questions the atlas pages made you wonder about. The questions could connect to your comments.

Example:

INTERESTING: On pages 8-9 Wendy thought it was interesting that at the time Christopher Columbus arrived in North America there were 500 Native American tribes.

QUESTION: Wendy's comment made Ms. Stark wonder... How many tribes are there now in the U.S?
